As an established commentator, reporter, presenter and journalist I thrive on the fast-paced, competitive nature of working in sports journalism and have satisfied this hunger by reporting all over the world on a wide range of sports from cricket to lacrosse to netball, tennis, athletics, rugby, hockey and multi-sport events.

I've delivered impactful work in broadcasting and print covering international and domestic sports tournaments. My work has been featured for rightsholders, including talkSPORT, ICC, BBC, World Lacrosse, The Telegraph, UCI, LTA, England Netball, Athletics Weekly, Women in Football, Team England and others.

In 2023, I commentated on my first World Cup—the inaugural ICC U19 Women's T20 World Cup. My commentary and hosting style were praised as 'insightful and informative while also entertaining and enjoyable.' Having made an impression there, I was approached to commentate the Legends League Cricket in Doha, where I was proudly the only female voice on commentary and featured in pre-match in-vision.

I've established myself as a go-to person in cricket and in particular women's cricket and women's sport. I'm regularly contacted for my expertise and recently hosted a women's cricket event and panel for over 300 people at Yorkshire Cricket Club. I make regular appearances on Times Radio, BBC local radio and LBC as a sports reporter and have taken part in sports panels on various Times Radio shows as well as talkSPORT, Sky Sports, BBC 5 Live and BBC World. A highlight is twice being asked to feature on Women's Hour.

I won the cricket edition of 'Celebrity Pointless,' which aired in 2022, and am a young ambassador for the MCC Foundation and a 'champion' for Her Game Too Cricket. I also host a successful women's cricket podcast, have been featured on various panels discussing the women's game, host a podcast for 'Bat for a Chance' charity and act as host and MC for women's sports events including a panel in front of 300 people at Yorkshire County Cricket Club looking at the growth of the women's game.
